COULD NOT HOLD NAPOLEON

In the Disguise of a Workman Future Emperor Passed Guard at Fortress of Ham

In discussing the flight of Louis Napoleon's nickname of "the little emperor" some details were given. Incidentally of his escape from the fortress of Ham in northern France on May 25, 1846. Fuller details are now available, thanks to the researches of M. Florin, and in view of the escape of Capt. Lee they have a special interest at the present moment.

It seems that the main credit for the escape must be given to Louis Napoleon himself. He made his way to the fort by a black wig, some long hair which was scrubbed with pomade, and a pair of boots. Then he put off his moustache, put on a blue apron, a blue pair of trousers and a close fitting shirt of coarse stuff.

Some workmen were carrying out some repairs to that part of the fortress where the prince lodged and this gave color to his disguise. So much so that the two watchmen entertained no suspicion regarding the man who walked past them and out at the great gate, a pipe in his mouth and a plank on his shoulder. The sentinel on duty at the drawbridge was trailing a net for an hour and took no notice of him. It was then 6 o'clock in the morning.

Four times that day, the last that at 5 in the afternoon did the Governor, Darnaud, send for the prince. Each time he came and replied that the prince could not see anybody because he had taken medicine. When at last the governor had patience and sent himself to the prince's room, and walked up to the bed on which the supposed invalid was lying, he discovered that a very respectable dummy had taken the place of Louis Napoleon. The discovery was made at 10 o'clock. By that time the flight was over the English frontier.

her guest room. A guest is frequently not accustomed to the same hours of rising and going to bed as prevail in the house where she is visiting. She may have a habit of early rising or of sleeplessness, or she may have merely a short time in her room with nothing to do when she does not wish to go down stairs or elsewhere to obtain books. At such a time a new book, an interesting magazine or two would prove most grateful. It is not necessary to have a whole guest room bookcase. One or two well chosen books will serve the purpose quite as well. It is a distinct compliment to a guest to have put enough thought into her tastes and interest to be able to offer her just the book or in fact a whole which she would wish to read. While this is not always possible with the best intentions something highly readable and new will rarely go amiss.

Life From Dead Material

Evidence that living plants or animals are still being produced from lifeless materials is offered by a French scientist. In experiments described at the Royal Institution they sterilized Escherichia coli with many methods, including five to twenty minutes in a high pressure vessel. Although bacteria are destroyed at such degrees, the fluid around them changed after six or seven months. Its content, however, was found to contain microscopic organisms, and there were proven to be living by their great growth in a few days in an incubator.

A woman in Vienna has been sent to prison for three months for speaking disrespectfully of Maria Theresia who has been dead for 150 years. In Austrian law royalty is protected from criticism written or spoken for 50 years after death.

After his brilliant victory at Chalmette in 1815, Andrew Jackson led his troops past the old French Market in New Orleans and treated the officers and men to fresh, hot French Market Coffee. And in 1843, Henry Clay—at the conclusion of his eloquent speech at the great banquet in his honor—slipped away, with his friends, to the old French Market for a cup of the same famous beverage. ENGLAND WILL PROBABLY PREVENT TRADE PACT

London Feb. 26.—It is reported in London circles today that the prospect of a national trade pact between the United States and Great Britain will be abandoned, and that the government will take over and control temporarily all the coal mines, and thus prevent a trade pact.

The first miners actually to lay down their tools were a few thousand employed in the Shropshire and Staffordshire pits in December, who ceased work at noon today.

Today is considered as the most critical day in negotiations between British coal mine owners and miners. Only a few hundred miners in the Shropshire and Staffordshire pits in December, who ceased work at noon today.

The Association of Mine Owners in South Wales and the executive committee of the South Wales Miners' Federation are in a deadlock.
